

In section 2 of the Act in the interpretation of MSSA 'pistol grip' (referred to in (a)(vi) of the definition) means a free-standing pistol grip

Free-standing pistol grip means -

- (a) the bottom of the grip of the firearm is not supported by or is not part of any one piece or integral structure (excluding the trigger guard) connecting the grip to the stock ; and
- (b) does not include a thumbhole, or Dragunov style stock.

Illustrations for the regulation

This is not a free-standing pistol grip because the grip is integrated with the stock; -and it is a thumbhole stock

This is not a free-standing pistol grip because the grip is integrated with the stock; and it is a thumbhole stock

This is not a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is integrated with the stock; and it is a Dragunov style stock

This is not a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is integrated with the stock; and it is a Dragunov style stock

This is not a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is integrated with the stock in a structural way

This is a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is not connected to the stock

This is a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is not connected with the stock

This is a free-standing pistol grip because the bottom of the grip is not connected to the stock in a structural way
(the rod is a contrivance)